

Where to Start After Your Systems Self-Audit

You took the AOF Systems Self-Audit. This guide shows you what to fix first, in what order, and what to ignore until the foundation is stable.

Use it with your emailed score breakdown. Fix revenue leaks before you buy more tools.

The fix order that actually works

1. Speed to lead: every inquiry gets a response within 5 minutes.
2. Pipeline clarity: every stage has an owner and a next action.
3. Follow-up: unresponsive leads enter an automated sequence.
4. Booking + payments: prospects book and pay without back-and-forth.
5. Integrations: data moves between tools without manual copying.
6. Owner dependency: revenue keeps moving if you step away for 7 days.

How to read your score band

Critical (0-4): Stop adding tools. Map the business on paper. Fix speed-to-lead and pipeline first.

Unstable (5-8): Revenue exists but systems cannot absorb growth. Automate follow-up before increasing ad spend.

Fragile (9-12): Core pieces exist but gaps will surface under pressure. Close integration and booking gaps next.

Solid foundation (13-15): Optimize and scale. Layer AI where manual labor is highest.

Your next step

Book a free 15-minute qualifying call: brianmarshall.dev/calendar

Explore the AOF Master Audit (13-block blueprint): brianmarshall.dev/aof

Questions: brian@areoclient.com

Brian Marshall · Business Systems Architect